DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-19, 22, 24-27, 29-33 and 37-38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by United States Patent Number 6,211,964 to Luscombe et al (hereinafter Luscombe).

Luscombe discloses in figures 4A, 5A, and column 6, line 23 to column 8, line 17, a continuous, flexible cylindrical device for detecting acoustic signals comprising:

- A flexible core including an acoustic substrate (122);
- An optical fiber (120) wound around said substrate; and
- At least one periodic refractive index perturbation formed in the optical fiber (abstract).

As to claim 2, the acoustic substrate contains a plurality of voids (foam).

As to claim 3, the voids are formed by hollow microspheres (foam).

As to claim 4, the material is compliant.

As to claim 5, a hollow tube is disclosed (146).

As to claim 6, a strength member is disclosed (140).

As to claim 7, multiple strength members are disclosed surrounding an inner tube (160).

As to claims 8-10, multiple jackets are disclosed.

Art Unit: 2883

As to claim 11, the materials are selected for having a dynamic property for limiting frequency response (column 7 line 1 – column 8, line 10).

As to claim 12, a hydrophone is disclosed (152).

As to claim 13, the fibers are wound around the hydrophone for noise elimination (column 8, lines 4-6).

As to claims 14-15, gratings are disclosed in the abstract.

As to claims 16-17 and 25-26, an acoustic tape is disclosed (128).

As to claims 18 and 27, Teflon is disclosed.

As to claim 19, a filler rod is disclosed.

As to claim 24, rubber filler materials are disclosed.

As to claim 29, outer elastic materials are disclosed.

As to claim 30, the voids are filled.

FIG. 4A

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 20-21, 23, 28, 34-36 and 39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Luscombe as applied to claims above.

Luscombe discloses the invention as claimed except for the specific disclosure of the brand (Trademarked), type of materials used and the specific size.

It is noted that Expancel, Norpar and Isopar are commonly available in the market and could be easily selected by one having ordinary skill in the art. It appears to the Examiner that applicant has not disclosed any criticality in the specific use of one material over the other. It is further noted that Luscombe does not limit the type of materials used. By merely selecting one material over the other is a general engineering practice to obtain the best preferred material for the intended use of the device. Examiner's contention of this obvious choice in design can be overcome if applicant establishes unexpected results by using one material over the other.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use said materials, since it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.
